Durries, of Mississippi, in Musical Fund Hall, Hhiladelphia, Wednesday forenoom November 10th. The hall was heaulifully decorated with buniting and flags, interspersed with ferns and evergreens. The back part of the stage was artistically filled in with palms and laurel, while in large variety. On a sightly elevated platform in front were scated the lady officers in regalia, Mrs. William Johnston, of California, Mrs. J. J. Woodman, of Michigan, Mrs. Put Darden, of Mississippl, representing Ceres, Flora and Pomona. Large bunches of grain and bouquets of flowers were arranged on either side, while in front stood a rable covered with choice fruit, the gifts of Bros. William Johnston, of California and J. S. Collins, of New Jersey. The rear of the hall was also bandsonely decorat at with festoons of grapes and other tropical fruits. There was also a fine variety of dried fruits all contributed by the same parties. The Grange being opened in the s xth degree the chairman of the Committee on Credentials reported twenty-four States prepresented, which number was subsequently increased to thicty, after which the National Lecturer, Bro. Mortimer Whitehead, of New Jersey, elected as such in Boston, at the last meeting of the National Gridney, was installed. A recess was then taken to receive a delegation of gentlemen representing the business men of the, city. Mr. John Garittee addressed the meeting for the merchants, for the conressed and annuaements, and to take a trip to Atlantic City, Governor-ciect Lure, of Michigan, extended the fargest sum thor het red, and the reports of the Secretary and Trehaurer were read, which showed that ninety-noe new Granges had been doubled, and large increase made in New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and other States, and that there remained in the National Trensury a balance of $60,000. He then gave as a reason for this change, that in the course of these forty years the Scotch furmers had equired habits of reading, and agricultural books had been extensively distributed among them. Besides this, many of them had visited other countries and had introduced new ideas at home. It is said that England owes its present prospe ous agricultural condition to the Board of Agriculture established in Scotland in [738; it brought men together, from different leval ites, and by interchange of views they obtained information of modes of culture in sections of which they were before ignorant. With all our present facilities and pravileges for general information, we should make agriculture a success. Let be boys and girls of the farmer's home be provided with every facility for study and culture, and the home made so attractive with books and pictures that it will be the Lappiest place on earth to them.

Mr. Morrison has beer twice defeateds in Congress and once by the people on his free trade bill. Now let his tarkf tlukering scheme remain in the grave thrice dug for

The six candidates for Governor of Califormla polled a total of 195,630 votes in the recent election, and the Democratic candidate received a plurality of only 642 over his Republican competitor.

The Boston Herald asks a question con cerning the meaning of the tariff and then answers it, but falls to note the important fact that it "meane" about seventy per cent, higher wages to the laboring man than is paid in free trade England.

The Democrats refer to the Citizens' election frauds in Indianapolis as a Republican organization, when, in fact, its president is a Democrat and eight of its fourteen officers are Democrats and Mug-

A few years ago the croakers were saying "the United States will never be able to pay its public debt," and open repudiation was prophesied. The trouble is Mr. Morrison can't call it up. Mr. Bass' organ approaches the Collectorship matter very cautiously. It was not until the question of an appointment had been practically settled at Washington of Gen. Roberts that Mr. Bass discovered that he was a Roberts man and then he came mighty near preventing the appointment by nearly boring the President to death. It is extremely fortunate for Gen. Roberts that Mr. Bass was not among his list of "zenions supporters" from the first, as another week of his presence at the Capital would have been fatal to the General's candidaby.

The Maine State Grange is now holding at Augusta the largest and most auspic ious meeting in the history of the organization. Maine stands in the forefront of the Granger order as regards the efficiency THAXTER& WISH. of the organization as well as the deep interest manifested in promoting the prosperity and general welfare of the farmer, and the representatives now assembled as the State Capital have every reason to congratulate themselves on the success atthined. No State in the Union can bosst of a more intelligent, thrifty and social body of agriculturalists than Maine. We hope that the present session of the Grange may prove both profitable and enjoyable cellent address yesterday, a full abstract of which will be found elsewhere as will also a special report of the proceedings. The appointment of John F. Lynch, Esq., as Collector of Customs in the Machias District was doubtless intended as a compensation for taking the Democratic nation for Congress in this district when nobody else wanted it. The present incumbent, Collector J. L. Pierce, was a good soldier and has proved a most faithful and efficient official in the discharge of his duties. He now retires to private life under this reform Administration in order that a Democratic politician may be rewarded, leaving an excellent record. There has been quite an animated contest over this office between the friends of Editor Drisko on the one hand and the friends of Mr. Lynch on the other and it is extremely doubtful if the appointment is extremely doubtful if the appointment touch to increase harmony in the ranks of libraries. ment. If the farmer thus raises from his farm in an economic manner all that he can in quantity, and dispess of it in the markets of the country or the highest prices, he has to that extend accomplished all that his want to his investments in lands, seed, labor, and farm expenses. The Grange is the fast friend of an intelligent agriculture, and by co-operat oh and association it assists the farmer in the best and most professhe dayled from the farmer from an economic stand point; is equally important that the farmer should obtain everything that he corst mas which he coes not resident the latter stream. tant that the farmer should obtain overything that he cors was which he coes not produce at the less, expense. His family supplies, seeds, ferril zers and farm implements should be purchased at the cheapest and most reasonable cost. This cannot be done by eargie and individual effort, it can only be reached by such a combination and co-operation as the Grango organization furnisies. By this means and by well devised business arrangements, the manufacturer of farm implements and the wholesale establishments of the country, sell to the Granger farmers ments and the wholeade establishments of the country, sell to the Granger farmers what they need at hist cost. I have mentioned the essential elements and factors for financial success. Patrons continue to uphold and strengthen the Grange, which is the only organization that practically holds the key for it elevation and iluancial success of the farmer. !

There are many in lirect influences which affect

The Grange wee ly 'meetlogs send a warm current of sociability and friendship into the farmor's family, without which life would be a blank. The farmer has peculiar advantates for mental study and soleial enjoyment during the months of snow and storms it winter, which belong to no other voet tion. It is his period of rest and comfort. The grange should flourish during the winter months. Much improvement can be juside around the fireside with the wife and children, but at the Gringe meeting we can read together, talk together, sing together, unprove together, cillivate, sociability and devise the best proton ties for advancement be lost. Avoid see useness and narrow mindness, and always bear in mind that we are everywhere in partnership land close communion wit the sons and daughters of the "home farm," and that those who live and thrive aurifounded by pleasant fields, mendows, streams and woods, and cu tivate the soil are members of the same noble farmly, having in common the same interests and sympathy, and should therefore all be Patrons of Husbandry. This vocation, therefore, above all others, commends itself as the best and highest employment for any member of the same interests and sympathy, and should therefore all be Patrons of Husbandry. The socation, therefore, above all others, commends itself as the best and highest employment for any member of the same interests and sympathy, and should therefore all be Patrons of Husbandry. The socation, therefore, above all others, commends itself as the best and highest employment for any member of the same interests of the agricultural sections of this country. Notwithstanding its numerous and populous cities, one-eighth of the population of the State of Maine is one of the fatrons of Husbandry. The lands are well ivided, among the population; and populous cities, one-eighth of the population of the same protection to the husbandman as is a warried to their pare itself in our valleys and country. The church nestles in our valleys and country and happiness, Patro THE FINANCIAL INTERESTS OF FARMERS of Maine. It is if he utmost importance that we have large and good markets, the nearer the public market to the farm the more profitable to the farm r. We find by comparing the productions of the farms of Mulne with those of other Northern Scates

There should be a denithy and well nalanced proportion of population divided between agricultural and other indistrial pursuits for national prosperity. We find that Great Britain has a na population of 1,000, only 140 engaged in agriculture to 545 engaged in their industries. This disproportion in many ways affects agricultural
